Activate windows 8 product key

You must have a valid product key to install Windows. If you don't have the product key on your Windows operating system, and it's not installed and works on your computer, but you still have the original disk, you may be able to request microsoft to key an alternative product for just $10, so you can install software on your computer. Your only alternative is to buy a new copy of Windows, so it will not at least try to get a cheaper alternative from Microsoft. If you lost the key to your product, but Windows is still installing and working on your computer, use an independent key finder program to remove the key from your registry. Follow these instructions to request a new Windows product key for Windows 10, Windows 8, Windows 7, Windows Vista, or Windows XP: If your copy of Windows is a retail copy or Preinstalled copy: Retail: Your Copy of Windows is a retail copy if you or a standsoft as another Windows can also be a retail copy of Windows if you come to your new computer and your computer came from a small builder. Step #3 to move to the next step. Preinstalled: Your copy of Windows is a Preinstalled copy if you purchased your new computer when it was already installed. This is possibly the case if you have an important brand PC and you have never installed a new copy of Windows. #2 step, Other: If you purchased or have been given a copy of Windows from your organization, business, or any other group, see step #2, but contact the group that is continuing instead. If Windows was preinstalled on your computer, please contact your original computer product to request a new product key directly. If your computer's carbox is not able to help you release the key to the alternative product for Windows, #3 step forward. Microsoft may still be able to help. Call Microsoft on 1 (800) 936-5700. This is a Microsoft paid support telephone number. Microsoft's site suggests that call support on this number charge $40 to $60. However, you are not charging this amount for a call about the key to a new product. Talk to a customer service representative about the key to your missing product to automatically indicate automatic attendees. The Microsoft representative will take your contact information — your name, telephone number, and e-mail address — and then ask for details about your issue. Tell this representative that you have your original Windows installation CD/DVD but an alternative product key is needed. Answer questions that the representative asks. They may include applications for specific details about your Windows installation disk, such as numbers around the inner circle of CD/DVDs and details about what words or pictures may or may not be on the disk.
